

Jones, Skelton & Hochuli's aviation attorneys successfully navigate federal and state statutes and regulations that affect the business operations of aircraft and the maintenance of aviation facilities. With knowledge acquired during decades of managing cases in nearly every facet of aviation law, we help clients successfully navigate the complex legal issues related to aviation. Our clients include pilots and other aviation professionals as well as manufacturers, airlines, airports, fixed-base operators and flight schools. From the initial on-scene investigation through the appeals process, our goal is to find cost-effective and efficient solutions to the legal obstacles our clients face.
