An experienced trial attorney, Michele Molinario has dedicated her professional career to two areas of law: government liability defense and employment law. Michele's career is focused on defending private employers and public entities and their employees, including police officers, detention officers, emergency responders, public works directors, building inspectors and traffic engineers, etc.

Michele is a longtime member of the firm's Governmental Liability/Employment Trial Group and is on the firm's Management Committee. She has tried both state and federal jury and bench trials and administrative law hearings. In addition to her 20+ years of trial experience, Michele has an impressive record for her motion practice. Michele routinely disposes of the vast majority of her cases through orders of dismissal or summary judgment.

Law Enforcement Defense

Michele is committed to defending law enforcement agencies and officers throughout Arizona and New Mexico. She has prevailed on summary judgment in cases involving the uses of force, false arrest, SWAT raid/breaching tactics, K-9 deployment, search and seizure, malicious prosecution, defamation, and negligent hiring. Her 14 years of experience working as a civilian at the Tempe Police Department in the Narcotics and Special Enforcement Unit has afforded her an insider's perspective with the various training exercises related to non-lethal and lethal force incidents, hostage negotiations, K9 deployment, and tactical breaching methods, etc.

Correctional Defense

Michele provides correctional defense across the various Arizona and New Mexico jails. Michele has prevailed on summary judgment in cases involving allegations of excessive force, unlawful prison conditions, due process violations, and First Amendment violations. Michele has defended public entities and private prisons in Section 1983 claims that include police-related non-lethal and lethal force incidents, failure to protect incidents, failure to render medical care, and various search and seizure incidents.

Employment Law

Michele maintains an active employment law practice defending private and public employers. She has prevailed on summary judgment in cases involving Title VII, FMLA, and discrimination allegations arising under 42 U.S.C.A. Section 1981. Michele has also successfully prosecuted and defended EEOC investigations, wage disputes, FMLA, Title VII, ADA, ADEA, and wrongful termination cases. She has also represented employers and employees before Merit System Boards, AZ POST, fingerprint boards, and other licensing boards in cases involving due process and disciplinary matters.

In addition to employment litigation matters, Michele provides comprehensive consultation services to public and corporate employers navigating issues such as employee disciplinary investigations, sexual harassment investigations, ADA interactive process discussions, FMLA leave, and other daily issues. Michele consults with employers to draft and review their policies and procedures to avoid litigation. In addition, she represents corporate employers bringing lawsuits against former employees for breaches of employment agreements, enforcing non-compete and non-solicitation provisions, and obtaining temporary and permanent injunctions against competitors from using confidential information.

Governmental Liability

Michele also defends public entities in cases alleging wrongful death, personal injury, and negligence related to hiring and supervision of employees, roadway design, flooding and building inspections, etc.

Outside of the firm, Michele can be found exploring the Valley's many hiking and walking trails and cheering on the Arizona Cardinals.

REPRESENTATIVE CASES

- Quinn v. Cardenas, 1 CA-CV 22-0398, 2023 WL 4880442 (App. Aug. 1, 2023) (Opinion holding that when a federal court grants summary judgment and enters a final judgment on those claims, but remands remaining state law claims back to state court, the federal court's final judgment is binding in the remanded state court action under preclusion doctrines (issue and claim preclusion) and as a result, Plaintiff's remaining state law claims in this action were barred by issue preclusion)
- Obtained dismissal of Plaintiff's case that challenged Arizona's civil asset forfeiture statutes. Court of Appeals affirmed the trial court's decision. Click here to read the full case summary.
