REPRESENTATIVE CASES

- Obtained dismissal in a products liability case involving gym equipment and over $200,000 in alleged damages. Plaintiff sued Defendant, the supplier of raw cable that was incorporated into a piece of gym equipment, when the cable broke and Plaintiff was injured. Defense argued that Plaintiff could not prove negligence for design defect because the equipment manufacturer tested the cable pursuant to ANSI before incorporating into their equipment. Additionally, Plaintiff could not demonstrate a manufacturing defect because the subject cable was not preserved. Plaintiff agreed to dismiss before filing a response to Defendant's MSJ.
- Secured dismissal in personal injury and products liability case involving a Chinese counterfeit vaping device. Plaintiff filed suit against Defendant manufacturer of vaping devices after a device exploded and severed one of Plaintiff's fingers. Defense obtained the dismissal of client by proving the subject vaping device was a Chinese counterfeit and not the Defendant's product.
